

DOES EUROPE NEED TO TAKE DENGUE SERIOUSLY?

Symposium at European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control, ECDC, Stockholm, Sweden - January 25, 2016

Monday 25 January

13:30-13:40	Welcome and Introduction to DengueTools Prof Annelies Wilder-Smith , Principal Investigator DengueTools, Umeå University, Sweden
13:40-14:00	Dengue in returning travelers; a clinician perspective Helena Askling , Stockholm
14:00-14:20	International dispersal of dengue through air travel: importation risk for Europe Jan Semenza , ECDC, Sweden
14:20-14:35	Modelling spread of dengue via air passengers Eduardo Massad , FUSP, Brazil
14:35-14:50	Imported dengue into Europe: insights from sequencing Andreas Neumayr , Swiss Tropical School of Public Health, Switzerland
14:50-15:00	DISCUSSION WITH ALL SPEAKERS
15:00-15:20	Coffee break
15:20-15:40	Aedes albopictus in Europe Paul Reiter , Institute Pasteur, France
15:40-16:00	Vectorial capacity of Aedes mosquitoes in European cities Jing Helmersson , Umeå University, Sweden
16:00-16:15	Why did the dengue outbreak occur in Madeira? Mikkel Quam , Umeå University, Sweden
16:15-17:00	Panel discussion: Does Europe need to take dengue seriously? Panelists: Annelies Wilder-Smith, Jan Semenza, Joacim Rocklöv, Paul Reiter, Herve Zeller, Eduardo Massad, Said Boubidi

Organized by EU FP7 Project DengueTools coordinated by Umeå University, Sweden in collaboration with European Centre for Disease Control (ECDC), Stockholm, Sweden